

by the nursing students and school nurse (until emergency medical services arrives).

4. The results could be lethal as discussed above. It is within the scope of practice of the school nurse to administer the IM epinephrine when the signs and symptoms of anaphylaxis are observed.

5. Yes, there is sufficient evidence for these interventions based on the literature on food allergy anaphylaxis in children.

Chapter 15

Discussing the Future

1. Evidence: Yes, there is sufficient information to arrive at a conclusion about what advice to give Jeremy's mother.

2. Assumptions:

- a. During adolescence, teens consider all of their past relationships as they attempt to form their own personal identity. They attempt to formulate a satisfactory identity from a multiplicity of roles, aspirations, and identifications. The process of developing this identity is time consuming and can be associated with confusion and discouragement.
- b. If significant others are too persistent and demand that adolescents make specific decisions or behave in definite ways, adolescents often make premature decisions and accept roles that do not incorporate their own personal goals or aspirations.
- c. Parents who communicate well with their teens
