We are grateful to our mentor and colleague, Donna Wong, whose support made us better pediatric nurses. We are fortunate to have worked for many years with David Wilson who served as a Co-Editor on numerous editions. We miss him greatly with this edition. We are also grateful to the many nursing faculty members, practitioners, and students who have offered their comments, recommendations, and suggestions. We are especially grateful to the contributors and the many reviewers who brought constructive criticism, suggestions, and clinical expertise to this edition. This edition could not have been completed without the dedication of these special people.

No book is ever a reality without the dedication and perseverance of the editorial staff. Although it is impossible to list every individual at Elsevier who has made exceptional efforts to produce this text, we are especially grateful to Sandra Clark and Heather Bays for their support and commitment to excellence. We want to say very special thanks to Heather Bays who has served the Wong textbooks for many editions with a commitment to excellence that is so appreciated.

Finally, we thank our families and children—for the unselfish love and endless patience that allows us to devote such a large part of our lives to our careers. The children have given us the opportunity to directly observe the wonders of childhood.
